COURSE DESCRIPTION
This course aims to provide students with an introduction to the study of fascism. It situates fascism in its historical epoch (ca. 1919–1945) while raising questions about its aftershocks and significance for contemporary politics and society. This semester we will focus on a variety of themes and questions that are central to the study of National Socialism, yet at the same time relevant for the comparative study of twentieth-century political societies around the world. The weekly readings and discussions revolve around classic and contemporary texts in the historiography of National Socialism. Attention will be paid to political leadership, social mobilization, coercion and collaboration, political violence and mass killing, and comparative theoretical frameworks. Students will attain a general understanding of the narrative development of fascism, as well as the historiographical and social scientific theories that have been used to interpret them. The course does not presuppose any prior background in European history.

ASSESSMENTS
Participation (attendance is compulsory): 15%
- Asking questions and engaging with your classmates’ comments are key elements of the seminar experience. Adequate preparation is essential.

Two short in-class presentations on the weekly readings: 20%
- Students are required to make two short presentations, possibly in a group setting. Each student’s contribution should last around 10 minutes. You should assume that everyone has done the reading; detailed summary or recapitulation of facts is unnecessary. Instead, focus on providing an overview of the argument of the text in question, ideally comparing and contrasting them with other readings from the same or previous week. You are encouraged to raise open-ended questions that can help guide discussion. PowerPoint presentations are welcome but not required.

10 pp. midterm paper: 30% due October 25
- Please address the following topic based on your analysis of the assigned readings: Explain the Nazi Party’s political success prior to January 1933. What was the movement’s appeal? What were its tactics? Which circumstances did it exploit to come to power?

10–15 pp. final paper: 35% due December 9
- Please address the following topic based on your analysis of the assigned readings: What was National Socialism’s vision of a “people’s community”? Did the Nazis succeed in creating one in Germany between 1933 and 1945?
ASSIGNED TEXTS
The readings are available on reserve in the university library and/or as PDFs on the course’s Canvas website. You are strongly encouraged to bring hard copies—that is, photocopies or print outs, rather than purely digital versions—to class for discussion.

EXPECTATIONS
Incompletes will not be granted in this course. Please note that this course enforces a zero-tolerance policy on cheating. If a student is found to have cheated or committed plagiarism, he or she will receive an automatic F in the course, and the case will be referred to the university administration for further action. If you have any questions or concerns about working with sources, please do not hesitate to ask me.
